

Are cheap hotels in Budapest harder to find than anywhere else in the Hungry?

Budapest hotels offer a wide range of accommodation matching the needs of backpacking visitors and holidaymakers from all over the world. For a long time the famous Spa City Budapest could not satisfy the demand for tourist accommodation due to the destruction after the second world war many of the Budapest hotels were out of use. As a consequence private apartment and house owners started to rent out rooms to paying-guests in the 1960's to compensate the void of hotel accommodation. This was the birth of cheap hotels in Budapest and soon these tiny businesses started to grow rapidly and developed into small privately owned family hotels and some of them into big modern three and four star hotels.
